

Sovereign VS Globalization

Sovereignty is the quality of having supreme, independent authority over a geographic area, such as a territory. It can be found in a power to rule and make law that rests on a political fact for which no purely legal explanation can be provided. In theoretical terms, the idea of "sovereignty", historically, from Socrates to Thomas Hobbes, has always necessitated a moral imperative on the entity exercising it.

For centuries past, the idea that a state could be sovereign was always connected to its ability to guarantee the best interests of its own citizens. Thus, if a state could not act in the best interests of its own citizens, it could not be thought of as a "sovereign" state.[[]

Globalization (or globalisation, also mundialisation) is the process of international integration, required due to the increasing connectivity and interdependence of the world's markets and businesses.

The major driving forces that speeds up the spread and connectedness of economies, and interlacing of economic and cultural activity; are the advances in telecommunications infrastructure and the rise of the internet. This has increased opportunity, but at the same time increased competition.

Though several scholars situate the origins of globalization in the modern era (16th century), others regard it as a phenomenon with a long history - dating long before the age of discovery and the discovery of the new world. Some even trace the origins to the third millennium B.C.

Conclusion

The New World Order is first ruled by people (politicians) most likely from Rome. It happens before the Antichrist rules and most likely after the Latter Rain. The New World Order has been happening for a long time. A moral and strong US is standing in the way. That is why the decline of the US. Also the War between Israel and Iran helps push for a New World Order.

I heard Leon Panetta say that the UN should be asked for permission to go to war before the US Congress.

Globalization will replace Sovereignty for the New World Order to go into affect. This is happening now!
